

APPENDICES – ADVERSE HEALTH EFFECTS FOLLOWING HERBICIDE EXPOSURE

Appendix 1 – Query to Retrieve Pubmed Records

The query consists of six components:

The first is a MeSH component with sub-headings, and consists of Herbicide MeSH terms with subheadings Adverse Effects/Toxicity applied (e.g., Herbicides/Adverse Effects).

The second is a MeSH component without sub-headings, and consists of Herbicide MeSH terms intersected with Adverse Effects MeSH terms (e.g., Herbicides [mh] AND Diseases [mh])

The third is a combined Herbicide MeSH and Adverse Effects Text component, and consists of Herbicide MeSH terms intersected with Adverse Effects Text terms (e.g., Paraquat [mh] AND “Parkinson’s Disease” [tiab]).

The fourth is a combined MeSH and Text component, and consists of Adverse Effects MeSH terms intersected with Herbicide Text terms (e.g., 2,4,5-TRICHLOROPHENOXYACETIC ACID [mh] AND glyphosate [tiab]).

The fifth is a Text component, and consists of Text representations of all Herbicides recognized by Pubmed intersected with Text representations of disease/damage terms (e.g., Diquat [ti] AND “Parkinson’s Disease” [tiab]).

The sixth component is an extra filtering step after the articles have been retrieved from Pubmed.

The original query plan was to include a seventh component utilizing the citation network (e.g., citing papers, bibliographic coupling, etc.). However, the Pubmed search engine is the wrong tool for traversing the citation network, so the six components used were viewed as adequate for the study.

While the six-component query is by far the most comprehensive I have seen for any herbicide study, it could still be improved in a better-resourced study. In particular, the herbicide text terms could be expanded. In the data sources I accessed for the study, there was not complete agreement on what constitutes an Herbicide, and even less agreement on how to represent the Herbicide in text format. While the non-formula representations were mainly similar, the formula representations were all over the map. Because of Excel’s format sensitivities, entering a source version of the formula into Excel did not guarantee it would be recognized by the search engine.

6. FILTERS APPLIED TO ENHANCE RELEVANCE OF RETRIEVAL

The first five components of the query above retrieved 52,600 articles from Pubmed for the time span 1974-2024. To enhance relevance of this retrieval, two filtering steps were added to the process. The first step consisted of concatenating the Titles/Abstracts/Substances/MeSH terms of each record into one text field for each record. Then, the list of Herbicide terms shown in Table 1A-1 was intersected with the concatenated field for all the retrieved records. Any record that did not contain at least one of the Herbicides was eliminated from the final retrieval. Then, the list of damage terms shown in Table 1A-2 was intersected with the concatenated field for all the records that survived the filtering based on Herbicide terms. Any record that did not contain at least one of the damage terms was eliminated from the final retrieval. These two filtering steps reduced the retrieval from 52,600 records to 50,870 records (~4% reduction). The final retrieval was viewed as highly relevant.

Assessment of genotoxic potential of arsenic in female albino rats at permissible dose levels.

Mammalian cell line-based bioassays for toxicological evaluation of landfill leachate treated by Pseudomonas sp. ISTDF1.

[Clarification of molecular targets of dioxin toxicity].

Risk ranking priority of carcinogenic and/or genotoxic environmental contaminants in food in Belgium.

Cytotoxic polyphenols from a sponge-associated fungus Aspergillus versicolor Hmp-48.

Antioxidant, mutagenic and antimutagenic activities of an aqueous extract of Limoniastrum guyonianum gall.

Diuron metabolites and urothelial cytotoxicity: in vivo, in vitro and molecular approaches.

Cytoprotective effect of bioactive sea buckthorn extract on paraquat-exposed A549 cells via induction of Nrf2 and its downstream genes.

High level of dioxin-TEQ in tissue is associated with Agent Orange exposure but not with biochemical recurrence after radical prostatectomy.

Thermally induced process-related contaminants: the example of acrolein and the comparison with acrylamide: opinion of the Senate Commission on Food Safety (SKLM) of the German Research Foundation (DFG).

Evaluation of THP-1 cell line as an in vitro model for long-term safety assessment of new molecules.

Quercetin reduces oxidative damage induced by paraquat via modulating expression of antioxidant genes in A549 cells.

Benzothiazole aniline tetra(ethylene glycol) and 3-amino-1,2,4-triazole inhibit neuroprotection against amyloid peptides by catalase overexpression in vitro.

Cancer incidence in Korean Vietnam veterans during 1992-2003: the Korean veterans health study.

Vietnam veterans: getting old, getting sick--is this service related?

Antimycobacterial and herbicidal activity of ring-substituted 1-hydroxynaphthalene-2-carboxanilides.

Impairment of Atg5-dependent autophagic flux promotes paraquat- and MPP⁺-induced apoptosis but not rotenone or 6-hydroxydopamine toxicity.

Curcumin analog 1, 5-bis (2-trifluoromethylphenyl)-1, 4-pentadien-3-one exhibits enhanced ability on Nrf2 activation and protection against acrolein-induced ARPE-19 cell toxicity.
